We plan to begin with the tried and true, systematic series of steps for painting in watercolor (it would be the same if you chose to use other mediums). That means beginning with a line drawing, value sketch, glazing colors, blending colors, etc.. But, the main emphasis for this class will be trying to paint what attracted you to the subject matter and what colors best describe the mood. The challenge is to paint what you feel (the descriptive adjective) and try to transfer that emotion to the viewer of your artwork. (March 18 is a make-up day, if needed.)

Texture is the surface imagery that makes us want to touch the surface, to experience what it feels like: soft and fuzzy, rough and rugged, etc.. In the first few classes we will stain papers and prepare surface textures in all manner of ways for use in the class exercises. That is the really fun, spontaneous, and “messy” portion of the class. You will have experience with many tools to use, then the challenge of making expressive experimental paintings and collages begins. Just about “anything goes” is the attitude for the class, though composition becomes very important. (No Class April 22nd.) Supply list available.

There is a method of teaching drawing where you use a grid as "training wheels for your eyes and hands" that produces phenomenal results! After using this method, you will be amazed at the progress you will experience in freehand drawing. The only requirements, are the ability to see and hold a pencil, and the dedication and patience to see this project through from start to finish! You will need to purchase your own drawing supplies and bring a treasured photograph to work from. A detailed list of supplies will be provided after registration.

The final painting will be reminiscent of illuminated manuscripts because we will use iridized and metallic pigments. You will create a beautiful work of art that commemorates the things, people, and events that make our lives worthwhile! You will need to bring your own paint brushes, if you have them. Other materials will be provided as a class fee. The fee will be determined by the number of participants.
